An appeal to Central Council Members

We shall remain concerned on various legislative matters pertaining to senior citizens at the state level. Shri Annasaheb Tekale ji is working on a few matters pertaining to us in three areas 1) Pension for seniors, 2) Health benefits, 3) Policy about senior citizen visits to places of Pilgrimage. On these topics, different states have different rules/ regulations. So, obtaining the latest GR s around these topics at every state level is valuable for us. We can compare the same and decide to use the information appropriately with other state governments. So, I am requesting everyone to share copies of relevant GR s with us to create a central repository, and also, it will be helpful for Shri Tekaleji for his immediated task.

Why an Association for Senior Citizens ?

II. Elders for Society:

Elders, especially the urban elders are often highly qualified, experienced and very influential with friends in high places. They have already solved all financial problems as they have a stable situation with no uncertainty and anxiety about the quantum of income. Above all, they dispose of free time and it is in their own interest to be active and feel still useful to society. Their continued meddling in family matters is, normally not very much welcomed by grown-up family members.

They actively participate in the formation of a senior citizens association or a Day Care Centre or any other civil society platform to get together with other seniors and to get engaged in the governance of so many social institutions which are around. We should not expect the government officers, politicians and the political parties to handle the problems that arise invariably in the fast transforming society.

a). One such social institution is the Resident Welfare Association, whether it is an apartments-building association or a colony welfare association or a Gated Community, in which, most probably the seniors have been at the origin of its formation. Some Resident Welfare Associations are including in their bye-laws, a provision to form an exclusive senior citizen club or a committee. The seniors, being a part of it, can see that many good things happen for the welfare of the families. They can transform all residents into a large joint family. They can further contribute to the development of the local area by being a part of the Ward Committee. Their activism in that area is very important as they have an assured place in the Ward Committees which, at present are still not functioning well. They should involve themselves, not anymore as leaders but as advisors in order to facilitate better relations with the municipal authorities and the local political personalities. They can form groups of residents for various cultural activities and encourage local talent. Since their own children and grandchildren are away, out of the station, they can express their love, affection, attention and help the children of the neighbouring families. When they give on rent a portion of their house to a young family and treat them as adopted members of their own family. In return, they would be anxious to render so many small supporting services that would make the life of the aged persons calm and comfortable. More than rendering services, they can, in return, shower their love, affection and attention which are very much needed for the emotional balance of seniors who do not have their own family members around.

b). Most states have formed District Senior Citizens Committees, headed by the District Collector in order to observe the condition of the seniors in the district and to advise him or her on the implementation of the policies and government programmes related to the senior citizens. As these Committees are composed of eminent seniors who have wide executive and administrative experience, they can as well observe all the welfare programmes implemented for all in the towns and villages of the district and give valuable and realistic feedback to the District Collector, without fear or favour.

III. Elders for Elders:

A. How to behave like an Elder?

It is no more possible to divide life into four ashrams as in the past. Modern life, being long and intense is to be divided into childhood, adolescence, youth, adult, senior and super-senior status; each phase having its complications. Though the current seniors have not had the experience of such intensity in their own lives, now, they have to recognize and take into account these specific phases while dealing with the other family members, who are living around.

a). Born as we are in traditional societies, we still expect to be treated respectfully, since we are seniors by age. But, today, in human relations in an emerging fraternal society, we should not expect others to recognise hierarchy and give respect due to our age. We have to get respect for what we are as an individual based on our demeanours or our appearance and behaviour. In short, Respect, you cannot command, you have to earn it. Relations within the family as well as outside the family are not any more hierarchical. In a democratic society, all are equal in dignity and cooperate in a friendly and cordial manner. The composition of blood is the same; it is neither thicker nor blue in colour. You are the other and the other is you. The English word 'you' conveys this spirit.

b). The moment a person retires or stops treating the job as the most stressing effort of the day, only then, one should start considering himself as an elder. There is a genetically-installed biological clock which tells that one is getting old and there are certain handicaps or limitations in our physical and mental faculties that begin to appear and that they would go on aggravating rather than disappear in course of life. Thus, it is a phase, when we have to keep struggling to keep our physical and mental faculties intact, as most of the faculties are likely to diminish, but not necessarily and not immediately. However, one should remain aware of one's limitations in moving, hearing, seeing, etc. If one is not aware of one's shortcomings, one is likely to put those around into difficulties. They will be tired of our company and would try to avoid us, if possible. The gap between the generations becomes wider and wider.

Though our ability to foresee future situations is faster and we can synthesise the issues that come up things more harmoniously, yet, anything new would provoke anxiety and fear. More so with the super-seniors. New situations appear to be a source of anxiety, worry and fear, instead of inciting our curiosity and readiness to explore. Many traits of a senior would resemble apparently, the early symptoms of an Alzheimer's patient, whether we realise them or not.

c). One has to learn to be independent, that is, autonomous as much as possible, as a matter of self-respect. A person who needs constantly others' attention and help inspires more pity in a practical sense than respect. Respect, no doubt, is there, but it would become notional. Nowadays, we can buy many necessary devices and tools to make ourselves less dependent. We can spread our dependence over several persons, in different places and at different timings.

d). When one is retired from a regular and routine job, one should consider oneself Reborn with new opportunities to grow. We can take up anything that we were passionate about since our childhood. There are surely many things that one wanted to do in the past, but could not do since s/he had no time or money to spare. Our hidden artistic tastes and talents, literary interests, games and sports, travel and other leisure activities or other desires for explorations that are pending for a long time should come out for expression since now we have time. We can excel in them now, better than when we were young. While pursuing our curiosity and explorations, we become more sociable, pleasant, friendly and dynamic. We live longer and happier. Formation of Aasara Committees and Day Care Centers in GHMC

In Greater Hyderabad Municipal Corporation, it was some knowledgeable senior citizens that have first sensitized the Corporation as well as the state government about their condition, role and place in the society, ever since the UN announcement of the World Elders Day in 1999. Initially, it was the senior citizens organizations that organized the events and the government officers were invited to participate. Later, the events are held jointly. Finally, impressed by the active role being played by the seniors in matters of governance, top officers like Sri. J. Harinarayana, the then Chief Secretary, Dr. C.V.S.K. Sarma, Special office and Commissioner GHMC, Dr. Vani Mohan, Addl Commissioner and Sri. Pudi Srinivasulu, Director have become instrumental in 2008 to register with the Registrar of Societies, a unique organization called 'Aasara' with the municipal officers and senior citizen associations as members in parity. GHMC has provided office space and staff too in the head office. In it, the Commissioner is the ex-officio chairperson and the Executive Vice-President is elected by the ward-level senior citizen committees.

Gradually, around 200 senior citizens associations are formed in and around Hyderabad and about 80 Day Care Centres are formed and supported by GHMC. Each association can boast of about 200 members on an average. In one of the meetings with the senior citizens, the then Commissioner GHMC, Shri Krishna Babu suggested to the Senior Citizen Associations, to nominate one of their Association members as a caretaker. Later, again, the Addl. Commissioner, GHMC, vide his letter No.233 /DCC/Aasara/GHMC/ 2008 dated 11.01.2013 advised the DMCs to set up Daycare Centres in each Senior Citizen Association of their Divisions and communicated to contribute Rs.3,000/- per month for the caretaker nominated by the Association. Accordingly, in many Divisions, Day Care Centres were established and have been active in enlisting seniors who are eager to show their talents in games and sports.

Since an outsider may claim permanent benefits at a later stage from GHMC, the Senior Citizen Associations have nominated their own member as Caretaker. Some office-bearers who acted as caretakers have been donating the amount back to the association for creating additional facilities. The job of a care-taker consists of rendering many services like daily sweeping, looking after the games and equipment items in the office, power and water management and opening and closing of the office every day, according to the timings. GHMC provided the initial material like a tread-mill, Carrom-board, Chess and other materials, as well as regular delivery of newspapers, Vide Lr.No.233/DCC/Aasara/GHMC/2018 dt.18.01.2013, the Additional Commissioner GHMC advised DMCs to form Aasara Circle Committees and also Circle Purchase Committees, in each Circle with the DMC, EE and with five members from Aasara Committee. An amount of Rs. 40, 000/- is allotted for strengthening the existing centres and Rs.50,000/- is allotted for new Day Care Centres. Accordingly, many Purchase Committees of the Circles received proposals from the senior citizen associations for daycare materials. Later, the amount is increased to Rs. 6,000 for the caretakers. The Circle Committees of seniors manage them. The Organising Secretary-I visits the Daycare Centres along with the Secretary. The Vice President presides over the meetings.

A Mini Story About Books

We, me and Berube (an American friend) daily go for morning walk early in the morning. We reside in Hollis N H in the U S A. He is like a guide for me telling me about the surroundings. One day I insisted to go up to the end of the road and on the way I saw a small wooden hut about 3’x2’x1.5’ fixed on a wooden platform . On getting close to it I found it packed with books. Some books were also staked outside. I was surprised to see books lying on roadside unattended. Berube told me that people who no more require these books leave them there. Whosoever wants to read these can take away and may or may not return it. I opened the door and felt as if books are looking at with wide open eyes and very eager to be picked up first. I took out one of them and it looked thankful for taking it out. Otherbooks too have felt relaxed as they could find more space for them now. The book remained with me for about 15 days and then I took it with me while on morning walk and reached the wooden hut to place it back. It fell from my hand as if praying not to put it back. I felt bad while placing it in and squeezing it a bit with other books. I closed the door with heavy heart and turned around fast.
